Introduction to Non-Conformist Records on Microfilm

What is a non-conformist?

A non-conformist is someone who could not be counted as part of the Church of England. They are often part of other churches. Examples include Quaker, Methodist and Baptist.

Up to 1644 non-conformists were persecuted and are unlikely to have kept written records. Even after 1644 they were often obliged to marry in the Church of England and were often buried in a parish churchyard. These events, however, may remain unregistered.

The Marriage Act of 1753 only recognised as legal those marriages taken by Anglican clergy (Quakers and Jews were exempt). Despite these tendencies many non-conformist churches did keep their own registers, often in the possession of individual ministers.

There is no requirement to deposit such records with local record offices so coverage can be patchy. Many records are held at The National Archives.

Details concerning what Roman Catholic registers are available on microfilm here at The Hive, is available in a separate handlist.

What do the records contain?

Like Church of England Parish Records non-conformist records contain baptisms, marriages and burials. Sometimes births and deaths are mentioned. Meetings of Society of Friends (Quakers) are sometimes included.

Using this Handlist

- Pages 3-6 provides a list of non-conformist records held by place.
- Pages 7-26 provides a list of records by denomination, giving the name and place of the church, chapel or meeting house, the record type, covering dates and corresponding film number. Any associated notes are also included.
- Pages 27-28 provides an index to the Wesleyan Methodist Historic Roll, which names people who contributed to the Million Guinea Appeal of 1898.
These records are on microfiche. They are arranged in the handlist by place, with fiche number and page numbers listed alongside.
- Please note that details relating to Roman Catholic Registers that are available on microfilm are provided in a separate handlist.

Wesleyan Methodist Historic Roll

The Wesleyan Methodist Historic Roll comprises of 50 volumes, organised into areas, in which the names of some 1,025,000 contributors to the Million Guinea Appeal of 1898 are recorded. The Appeal raised £1,073.682 before it was closed in 1908 and was used to purchase the site of the Royal Aquarium opposite Westminster Abbey, build Westminster Central Hall and expand the missionary work of the Wesleyan Methodist Church both at home and abroad.

The microfiche at Worcestershire Archive and Archaeology Service comprise of fiche numbers 1-19 from volume 22. These contain the Worcestershire Circuits which were part of the Birmingham and Shrewsbury District in 1898-1908.
